

Acknowledgments

Until quite recently I did not know if the day really comes when I can finish my dissertation and write the acknowledgment. Now I am sure that a lot of people around me made it possible for me to do it. First I would like to thank my thesis committee: Nobuhiro Kaga, who gave me a chance to submit my dissertation to University of Tsukuba and has been encouraging me to finish it, Masao Okazaki, Hiromi Onozuka, Masaharu Shimada, and Norio Yamada, who gave me valuable comments and suggestions. I am grateful to Yukio Hirose, whose thesis interested me when I was a graduate student.

I would like to thank Seizo Kasai, who has been my advisor at Hokkaido University for more than twenty years. His love of languages as well as his deep insights into them awoke my interest in linguistics. The people of Sapporo Linguistics Circle gave me wonderful opportunity of presenting and discussing my ideas. I am grateful to Masanobu Ueda, Katsuhide Sonoda, Kimihiro Ohno, Haruhiko Ono, Yoshihiro Yamada, Seiji Ueno, Hiroyuki Kageyama, and Satoshi Oku. I would like to thank the people in the linguistic department at Hokkaido University: Jiro Ikegami, Toshiro Tsumagari, Fubito Endo, Osamu Kawagoe, and Yuko Kawauchi. The syntax reading group was the starting point of my career as a linguist.

The year I spent at Amherst, Massachusetts widened my research area. There I met a number of wonderful linguists. I would like to thank Barbara Partee, Elisabeth Selkirk, Lyn Frazier, Norvin Richards, Junko Shimoyama, Kiyomi Kusumoto, Mariko Sugahara, Masako Hirotani, Bozena Cetnarowska, Anthi Revithiadou, Kim Hak-Yoon, Hainer Drenhouse, and Akihiro Tsutsui. During my stay in Amherst, I often visited Boston, where I met Inada Toshiaki, Tsuyoshi Oishi, Minoru Amanuma, and Akihiko Uechi. I would like to thank Susumu Kuno for giving me a chance to talk at Harvard University.

I also met wonderful linguists at academic meetings and summer institutes both in Japan and in the states. I would like to thank Naoko Hayase, Masatoshi Koizumi, Shin-ich Tanaka, Takeru Homma, Kayono Shiobara, and Yoshihito Dobashi.

I am also grateful to Shosuke Haraguchi, Takeshi Kohno, Koichi Tateishi, and Haruo Kubozono for their valuable comments and suggestions. I would also like to thank Hideyuki Hirano who encouraged me with his kind words and warm smile.

William Jones and William Green kindly corrected my stylistic errors. I would like to thank Heiko Narrog for his help with German.

People at Sapporo University kindly helped me with discussion and gave me a lot of support. I am grateful to Hideto Hamada, Yoshihisa Goto, and Yasutomo Kuwana.

Finally, I would like to thank my family, especially my parents, Hiroshi and Kinuko Tokizaki for their love and support. This thesis is dedicated to them.